

A Hyderabadi Woman

The shy, gentle look of the Hyderabadi Muslim girl is accentuated by her attire—a vermilion silk gharaikata, (full length gathered, divided skirt with a hip-length shirt) and a heavily hand-embroidered dupatta (veil), draped over the head to partly cover the face, when necessary. Gold jewellery, incorporating the peacock in its design, and the special Muslim hair ornament, the jhoonari, in the crescent moon design, completes the costume.

A Hyderabad Woman

The shy, gentle look of the Hyderabad Muslim girl is accentuated by her attire—a vermillion silk gharara-kurta, (full length gathered, divided skirt with a hip-length shirt) and a heavily hand-embroidered dupatta (veil), draped over the head to partly cover the face, when necessary. Gold jewellery, incorporating the peacock in its design, and the special Muslim hair ornament, the jhoomar, in the crescent moon design, completes the costume.
